"Leaders must be close enough to relate to others, but far enough ahead to motivate them." - John C. Maxwell

Based on the first quote made by John Quincy Adams and as development team members, we are all leaders. Each and every day our conversations and activities with donors and prospects inspire them to learn more about our organizations and missions; we encourage them to make a difference in the lives of others. The second quote says leaders build strong, friendly relationships allowing us to influence them to do something more with us – that's fundraisers in a nutshell!! A person doesn't have to hold the title of VP of Development or Director of Development or even Executive Director to be a leader in our profession.

September Ethics Case: Whose Line is it Anyway?

Ethical standards and principles are the foundation for maintaining public trust for every AFP member. Have you ever wondered what you would do when confronted with an ethical dilemma? In our Monthly Ethics Article, AFP Suncoast explores some common quandaries with Case Studies to help you test your knowledge.

September Ethics Case: Whose Line is it Anyway?

A small, fundraising company retains the services of a freelance web specialist to re-position and re-design its web presence, in order to more effectively exploit this channel for its marketing efforts. The company is delighted with the results of her work and the value for money offered.

Unfortunately, what the company does not know is that the designer has plagiarized some of the new material introduced onto the website, and that the intellectual property (IP) owner has not been properly credited.

- A. Is the company in violation of the Code of Ethical Principles?
- B. Suppose the company were informed of the violation by the IP owner, and referred the matter to its next board meeting, three months hence, for a decision on what action to take. Would this be a violation of the Code?
- C. The company approaches the web designer to demand that she rectifies the situation, and either properly credits, or removes, the offending material. The designer demands a further fee for so doing, which the company refuses to pay on principle. Is the company in violation of the Code?
